

Holocaust Memory Continues, But Knowledge Is Fading

REFLECTION QUESTIONS

- How can we ensure the portals of entry lead to a realistic, truthful representation of both the history and the unique Jewish experience under the Nazis?
- How can the average person decipher what is crucial or periphery knowledge or information?
- How can one wade through the fiction for the truth?
- Is there a negative impact of Holocaust memory on Jewish identity?
- Is the Holocaust used as a tool for peptuating "victimhood?"
- Is there a difference in how to teach Jews vs. non-Jews?

- Are we prepared for the next generation without survivors?
- What is the responsibility of the 2nd and 3rd generations?
- What is the legacy we are passing on to the future generations of descendants? Is there something innate about their responsibility?
- Are they any more responsible for the protection of memory than the rest of the Jewish people?

- When did Holocaust denial begin?
- How has it changed over the years? Denial to BDS transition
- What are the top 3 tools necessary to confronting a Holocaust denier?
- Facts vs. Emotionalism

- How can the common Jew contend with the abuses of the Holocaust by the anti-Israel/ anti-Zionist streams?
- How do you know when to respond or when to ignore and walk away?

- How can we "frame" Holocaust memory in a way that it retains its uniqueness without desecrating the memory of other victims of Nazis?
- How can we contend with illegitimate comparisons to other genocides?

- How can we ensure that "Never Again" and "Never Forget" are not empty catchphrases that lack meaning, direction for action, or are distorted for alternative purposes?